Mit inzwischen über 7400 Mitgliedern gehört die im September 2015 gegründete Facebook-Gruppe Ladies of Luxembourg zu den beliebtesten Austauschplattformen für Expats in Luxemburg. Die unterschiedlichen Themen, die dort täglich angesprochen und diskutiert werden, vermitteln nicht nur einen Eindruck darüber, welche Herausforderungen und Probleme sich Expats stellen, sondern auch welche Formen der Solidarität aus der gemeinsamen Erfahrung des Fremdseins entstehen.

Good evening ladies.. I have a question that isn't of favorable topic but the question crossed my mind and I had to ask: so what happens if non-european expat (without any relatives here) died in Luxembourg? who will take the responsibility of transporting the body to the country of origin? In my case, the embassy is in belgium and I am not registered yet, noting that non of my family has visa to Luxembourg. In other words, should I write something with a lawyer here to take care of such issues and the financial ones or with my embassy? Many thanks and sorry for the disturbing question but I had to ask

Hello. Happy Sunday
I would like to ask where to go and get my qualifications recognised here?
I have teaching master degree from Slovakia and diploma in childcare from the UK.
I'm thinking to check my options and work with kids again.
Thank you

Ladies, please help me. I sent out a few messages on athome because we might need to move in a few months. You know, just to see what is out there. One response from one of the agents was this:
"Merci pour votre intérêt concernant l'appartement. Prière de bien vouloir nous transmettre votre dossier afin que nous puissions le présenter au propriétaire :
Votre carte d'identité + carte de sécurité sociale
Contrat de travail
3 dernières fiches de salaires"
I am sorry but to me this seems shady, why would I share this level of sensitive info with a stranger, when we haven't even seen ONE apartment, we have not met him in person, we have basically had NO contact whatsoever besides a pre-written email from athome?! I mean I haven't even SEEN the apartment, maybe it horrible?!

Is this a normal procedure?

Hello can I clarify if I have the sproochentest passed and I am sitting the civics exam what paper work do I need for the civics exam registration and then what happens after I have passed both sproochentest and civics exam? If anyone who has been in this position wouldn't mind me private messaging them a few questions I'd be very grateful.

Happy weekend ladies!

I've got a question concerning communal payments. I wonder who's responsible for covering the costs of such services as hall cleaning, gardening etc in a building with several floors of appartments? Is it normal to include these costs in communal?? I'm asking as if these costs should be normally splitted between all the tenants (as it is in my case) it makes monthly communal spendings enourmously high as they also include our electricity and water consumption.

I don't have anything about what should b... See more

Asking for a non-EU passported friend:

if you are new in Lux and have a masters in finance what second degree would be good to increase chances on the professional job market?

My friend is already taking her language classes - it is an affordable second Uni degree she is hoping to pursue.

And also, does the Lux government have a job advice service?

Hi ladies, a very practical question typical to the season - where do we need to throw away a Christmas tree? 🙄🙄 I thought that the guys collecting the trash are supposed to pick it up, but didn't happen... Many thanks!! :)

I love this group, females helping each other. It upsets me when there are bitchy comments, like if someone about asking hours of the shops being open. Most of us are here without family, managing our own families. Yes we might ask a question asked before, but perhaps that is a reflection of how hectic a day that person is having so they turn to us for help. Politeness goes a long way and is something we should all adhere too however so is compassion. Living abroad with 2 kids (3 if you consider the husband 🙄) is the hardest thing I have ever done and I am truly grateful for the support.

Dear ladies

I'm going to a psychologist to help my kids in our adaptation after moving to Luxembourg.

He told me that CNS doesn't cover this kind of treatment does anyone know about it?

Dear Ladies,

I'm quite new to Luxembourg city, I miss my job, I struggle with learning French, and I just don't wanna loose my mind and motivation.

Yes, I am already a member of InterNations and also of a good gym. But I would rather like to meet with likeminded women who are in the same situation with a good sense of humor, motivation, and an open mind to new opportunities.

Just send me a PM. I'm looking forward to meeting you!
